

Ming Khor is the founder and CEO of Keru, a social enterprise that organized professionals and students to do meaningful projects in the social sector.

Ming grew up in Maryland and went to the University of Toronto, majoring in International Relations. After graduating, he followed his passion to make an impact in education and taught English in Hunan province with WorldTeach, a volunteer organization run out of the Harvard Center for International Development. Ming continued his journey in education with the non-profit Teach For China as a program manager, and spent two years in Yunnan.

He later attended the University of Pennsylvania through a dual degree program at the Wharton School of Business and the Lauder Institute of Management and International Studies with the desire of making social impact through business. He started Keru in 2016 and moved to Shanghai.

Ming 是美国教育机构 Keru 的创始人和 CEO，该公司为参与者提供以转型项目为基础的教育及社会体验。

本科毕业于多伦多大学国际关系专业，毕业后参加了哈佛大学国际发展中心下属的 WorldTeach 在中国湖南省开展的支教活动。支教结束后加入了非盈利组织 Teach For China（中国教育行动），负责其在湖南省的发展和运作。受此启发，Ming 申请了宾夕法尼亚大学沃顿商学院及劳德管理和国际研究学院的双学位项目。
