I went to Wharton/Lauder to become an investment banker and left with the tools and desire to become an international entrepreneur. Because of Lauder's transformational experience, I have been fortunate to be the founder of 2 language services companies offering services in 100+ languages and hiring talent in 30+ countries; one real estate investment firm that makes land investments in Texas that are fueled by investors from Latin America, and one concrete pipe manufacturer serving the Houston Metropolitan area.

I was raised in Colombia and am a by-product of having access to education and globalization. Those continue to be my passions. As president of the Association of Language Companies (www.alcus.org) an organization focusing on advancing language services worldwide, we grew revenue by 35% and redesigned board positions to better attract talent. As a current trustee of St. John's School (www.sjs.org), a highly recognized private college preparatory school with a $100 million endowment, I have learned firsthand the current challenges and opportunities in education and honed leadership skills. I am also a current board member of the Wharton Alumni Club of Houston. Being part of LIAA's board would allow me to contribute and participate in both of my passions while being closer to an institution that is dear to me. I can bring non-profit board experience and 20+ years of dreaming, creating, and growing enterprises.

I also bring soft skills such as creativity, the ability to unite, and a high level of energy
