

Dr. Regina M. Abrami

Director of Global Program, The Lauder Institute

Dr. Regina M. Abrami is the Director of the Lauder Institute's Global Program and Head of its International Studies faculty at the University of Pennsylvania. She holds appointments in the Departments of Political Science and Management as Senior Lecturer and Senior Fellow, respectively. At the Lauder Institute, she is broadly responsible for interdisciplinary curricular development in support of the university's joint-degree MBA-MA program in International Studies. At Wharton, she teaches the popular elective course, "Managing and Competing: The Case of China." Dr. Abrami brings to the Lauder Institute a passion for, and expertise in international and comparative political economy, experiential education, intercultural group dynamics, and strategic foresight.

Prior to Wharton, Dr. Abrami served on the faculty of Harvard Business School for 11 years in various capacities, serving as inaugural faculty chair of its international immersion program, faculty member in its "Business, Government, and International Economy" unit, and co-designer of its "Doing Business in China" course. HBS honors include appointment as a Hellman Faculty Fellow, awarded for distinction in research, and the Robert F. Greenhill Award, given in recognition of distinguished service. In 2017, she won an Aspen Institute "Ideas Worth Teaching" award for her Lauder Institute course on foresight strategy.

Dr. Abrami has authored dozens of HBS case studies, and continues work on the political economy of national innovation, economic development, and the geopolitics of national economic security, with special focus on China. In addition to media appearances, her published work has appeared in Comparative Politics, Journal of East Asian Studies, Harvard Business Review, Marketwatch (WSJ), the China Policy Institute, the Oxford Handbook of Asian Business Systems. In 2014, her book, Can China Lead? Reaching the Limits of Power and Growth was published by Harvard Business Review Press.

Dr. Abrami earned her Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of California, Berkeley, where she was both a Reinhard Bendix and John L. Simpson Memorial Fellow. She is a member of the Pacific Council on International Policy, Phi Beta Kappa, and a former Fellow of the Social Science Research Council and the Fulbright-Hays Program. Her languages include Mandarin and Vietnamese.