I was born in Argentina in a European family and emigrated to the UK in 2009 after graduating from Lauder. My professional path has been a squiggly one, going from legal services to finance to tech. In tech, I've had the opportunity to work in some of the best brands in the UK as well as be part of the ET in one of the most successful exits in the market. I define myself as a problem solver that cares about the people I am solving the problem with and the impact it has in the world.

After almost 15 years focusing on my career and family, I have made the conscious decision of reprioritizing. One of my key priorities going forward is giving back and I would love to start this journey with the Lauder community. This group has given me more than I hoped for when I started the program, and it feels right to start this new journey focused on this community in a more committed capacity.

I am a planner that also loves connecting people. Having had the chance to learn more about the initiatives under Women's and Tech affinity groups, I am delighted to see that the programming and opportunities to connect are growing. I would love to continue supporting in these, as well as champion other initiatives around (1) building a tighter connection between students and alumni and (2) building a more vibrant and engaged community outside the US.

Best,

Ianina
